The Oxford Handbook of Cognitive Sociology 2019-06-26 includes the section book notes

Jocks and Burnouts 1989-01-01 we may not realize it but truth and place are inextricably linked for ancient greeks temples and statues clustered on the side of mount parnassus affirmed their belief that predictions from the oracle at delphi were accurate the trust we have in Thoreau's wisdom depends in part on how skillfully he made Walden Pond into a perfect place for discerning timeless truths about the universe. Courthouses and laboratories are designed and built to exacting specifications so that their architectural conditions legitimate the rendering of justice and discovery of natural fact. The on-site commemoration of the struggle for civil rights—Seneca, Selma, and Stonewall—reminds people of slow but significant political progress and unfinished business. What do all these places have in common? Thomas F. Gieryn calls these locations “truth spots,” places that lend credibility to beliefs and claims about natural and social reality about the past and future and about identity and the transcendent. In truth spots, Gieryn gives readers an elegant rigorous rendering of the provenance of ideas: uncovering the geographic location where they are found or made, a spot built up with material stuff and endowed with cultural meaning and value. These kinds of places include botanical gardens, naturalists’ field sites, Henry Ford’s Open Air Historical Museum, and churches and chapels along the pilgrimage way to Santiago de Compostela in Spain. Would seem at first to have little in common but each is a truth spot, a place that makes people believe truth may well be the daughter of time. Gieryn argues but it is also the son of place.

The Place of Werner Stark in American Sociology 2008 How racism shapes urban spaces and how African Americans create vibrant communities that offer models for more equitable social arrangements.

Seven Rules for Social Research 2008 Time and place are of the greatest significance for scientific inquiry about human lives as we seek to better understand the nature and rhythm of the life course in modern societies. Its effective analysis and explanation simultaneously becomes more pressing and more complicated. This information is crucial for developing and reforming social policies, services, and interventions aimed at improving human development and welfare. Yet as our scientific treatments have become more elaborate, they have also become more fragmented within and between academic disciplines across the study of specific life periods and by method.

Sociology and Social Research 1927 This interdisciplinary book explores the role of art in placemaking in urban environments, analysing how artists and communities use art to improve their quality of life. It explores the concept of social practice placemaking, where artists and community members are seen as equal experts in the process. Drawing on examples of local level projects from the USA and Europe, the book explores the impact of these projects on the people involved in their relationship to the place around them and on city policy and planning practice. Case studies include art tunnel Smithfield Dublin, an outdoor art gallery and community space in an impoverished area of the city. The drawing shed London is another contemporary arts practice operating in housing estates and Cains in Walthamstow and Big Car Indianapolis is an arts organisation operating across the whole of this Midwest city. This book offers a timely contribution, bridging the gap between cultural studies and placemaking. It will be of interest to scholars, students, and practitioners working in geography, urban studies, architecture, planning, sociology, cultural studies, and the arts.

Truth-Spots 2018-05-22 The term space is inherently geographical. Educational provision and activity takes place within spaces ranging from a room at home or in a school to a campus to an administrative area which could be a state within a country. A whole country or a group of countries such spaces are known as geographical surfaces within these spaces the process of learning and teaching takes place at particular points that are often nodes in a network which may be formal such as a group of schools or universities or non-formal such as in cyberspace. Understanding what goes on depends on the scale at which it is observed ranging from individuals to global outreach.
