ancient sources and are current in the literature of many lands. Some have come to us through the ballads and folk tales of the English people. A few are of quite recent origin.

The literatures of ancient peoples, such as the Greeks and the Hebrews, contain a considerable number of stories. A fourth class includes the half legendary tales of a distinctly later origin which have for their subject matter human actions and experiences. All of these stories are full of action, adventure, and excitement. Some stories are better known and therefore more famous than others. Some have a slight historical basis, while others are more or less legendary. It is impossible to say exactly where the line should be drawn between the two classes.

Another class includes the popular fairy tales which have delighted untold generations of children and will continue to delight them to the end of time. To another class belong the tales of the king and his cat, which are often known as the tales of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table. These stories are full of adventure and romance, and they have been enjoyed by people of all ages for hundreds of years. They have also been translated into many different languages and have been adapted to the stage and screen.

The best of our literary heritage is contained in the present volume. The stories are drawn from many different sources, including the literature of ancient times, the ballads and folk tales of the English people, and the works of modern writers. The stories are full of action and adventure, and they are sure to delight readers of all ages.

knowledge of them is an indispensable part of one s education these stories are of several different classes to one class belong the popular fairy tales which have delighted untold generations of children and will continue to delight them to the end of time to another class belong the limited number of fables that have come down to us through many channels from hoar antiquity to a third belong the charming stories of olden times that are derived from the literatures of ancient peoples such as the greeks and the romans who besides these books of well known heroes and famous men or in the history of a people it is to this last class that most of the fifty stories contained in the present volume belong as a matter of course some of these stories are better known and therefore more famous than others some have a slight historical value some are useful as giving point to certain great moral truths others are products solely of the fancy and are intended only to amuse some are derived from very ancient sources and are current in the literature of nearly all the folk races of the earth people in a few are of quite recent origin nearly all are the subjects of frequent allusions in poetry and prose and in the conversation of educated people care has been taken to exclude everything that is not strictly within the limits of probability hence there is here no tarrying upon the domain of the fairy tale the fable or the myth that children naturally take a deep interest in such stories no person can doubt that the reading of them will not only give pleasure but will help to lay the foundation for broader literary studies can scarcely be doubted that believing therefore that the present collection will be found to possess an educative value which will commend it as a supplementary reader in the middle primary grades at school it is also hoped that the book will prove so attractive that it will be in demand out of school as well as in acknowledgments are due Fifty Famous Stories Retold [with Images and Illustrations] | 1891-28 many years ago there lived in eng land a wise and good king whose name was alfred no other man ever did so much for his country as he and people now all over the world speak of him as alfred the great in those days a king did not have a very easy life there was war almost all the time and no one else could lead his army into battle so he and between ruling and fighting he had a busy time of it indeed a fierce rude people called the danes had come from over the sea and were fighting the eng lish there were so many of them and they were so bold and strong that for a long time they gained every battle if they kept on they would soon be the lords of the whole country and very rich indeed after a great battle to eng lish and sc den men sendered every man had to save himself in the best way he could king alfred fled alone in great haste through the woods and swamps late in the day the king came to the hut of a wood cut ter he was very tired and hungry and he begged the wood cut ter s wife to give him something to eat and a place to sleep in her hut the wom an was making cakes upon the hearth and she looked with pity upon the poor rag ged fellow who seemed so hungry she had no thought that he was the king yes she said i will give you some supper if you will want to work i have been told that she even struck the king with a stick but i can hardly be lieve that she was so ill na tured the king must have laughed to himself at the thought of being scolded in this way and he was so hungry that he did not mind the woman s angry words half so much as the loss of the cakes i do not know whether he had any thing to eat that night or whether he had to go to bed without his supper but it was not many days until he
