economics marketing corporate communication cmr market research social media grade 1 7 akad university of applied sciences pinneberg course fgi 03 language english abstract today's business is based on the division of labor different people have to work together in order to create values and offer products or services but these people are individuals with different needs and wants different skills and abilities they have different social economical or cultural backgrounds as well as different working methods they have opposing interests and suffer from a lack of information about what other people do. it is the duty of the division of labor to coordinate the activities of the different individuals and to ensure that all individuals creating a unified direction of work by this all efforts can be focused on a common goal commonly the terms management and leadership are used synonymous with reference to the coordination function in business or administration this raises the question whether there is a difference between the two terms management and leadership and if so how this difference can be described and defined sometimes one can hear the saying that managers do the things right but leaders do the right things this adage states a significant difference between leadership and management however there is a heated debate about this topic the opinions differ widely about this topic this paper will discuss the terms management and leadership in a theoretical and practical way these two terms will be defined as well as differentiated from each other a special focus will be laid on the management functions and managerial roles and activities this will be discussed from a theoretical point of view in addition a practical example will clarify the theoretical angle this study explores the work life of mayors city managers and top executives in city government based on a survey of 527 city executives and enlivened with numerous anecdotes the book documents time allocation patterns and work routines city executives makes comparisons with previous studies to show how city executives compare with managers in other types of organizations the authors also note how city managers role has changed over a 20 year period city executives are shown to be like their private sector counterparts for example they function at a relentless pace are frequently interrupted in their work and are generally overburdened however because city workers operate in an environment open to public scrutiny they are left with only a minority of their professional time to attend to matters that they describe as priorities instead they must constantly respond to intergovernmental demands emergencies and the needs of citizens and legislative officials principles of their contribution in monitoring and controlling management particularly in the wake of high profile corporate frauds and failures and also their potential to add value to organizational performance through involvement in the strategy process and through building relationships with key investors despite the importance of these issues not only to organizations but also arguably to national competitiveness the nature of board activity remains largely a black box clouded by prescriptions prejudices and half truths this book responds to calls for greater scrutiny of boards of directors with an in depth examination of directors of uk organizations drawing on the accounts of directors themselves as to their roles influence and the potential and limits to their power much work on boards of directors has labelled the board as a rubber stamp for dominant management and non executive directors in particular have been variously described as poodles pet rocks or parsley on the fish such accounts are rooted in assumptions of boards of directors has labelled the board as a rubber stamp for dominant management and non executive directors in particular have been variously described as poodles pet rocks or parsley on the fish such accounts are rooted in assumptions of board activity that are essentially adversarial in nature and that the solution to the problem of reconciling the interests of managers with those of shareholders is to increase the checks and balances available to the board of directors the findings of this study show that boards in many cases are far more than passive rubber stamps for management and that non executives are encouraged to act as trusted advisers to the executives and the chief executive rather than solely monitors of executive activity boards are important mechanisms in maintaining the strategic framework of the organization through setting the boundaries of organizational activity the potential of the board members in particular the non executives to fulfil such a mandate depends on a number of factors including ability willingness to engage with the organizational issues and the degree of policy that they have relevant to the host firm above all the degree of trust built between members of the board and between the board and key external constituencies is at the heart of effective board behaviour how are the line management roles and structures s objectives aligned to the organization s overall business strategy what are your best practices for minimizing line management roles and structures project risk while demonstrating incremental value and quick wins throughout the line management roles and structures project lifecycle how will you measure your line management roles and structures effectiveness how frequently do you track line management roles and structures measures how do you ensure that implementations of line management roles and structures products are done in a way that ensures safety defining designing creating and implementing a process to solve a challenge or meet an objective is the most valuable role in every group company organization and department unless you are talking a one time single use product there should be a process whether that process is created and implemented by humans or a combination of the two it needs to be designed by someone with a complex enough Idealistic goal Hargrove and Glidewell flesh out their analysis with six case studies that focus on the roles played by leaders of specific agencies. Each essay summarizes the institutional strengths and weaknesses, specifies what makes the job impossible and then compares the skills and strategies that incumbents have employed in coping with such jobs. Readers will come away with a thorough understanding of the conflicting social, psychological, and political forces that act on commissioners in impossible jobs. This book specifies managerial roles, describes a technique for identifying key performance areas relating to those roles, and discusses the ways in which effective planning, control, and information systems in support of such key performance areas can be designed.

Corporate Governance and Ethics 2008-06-16

If you think your job is hopelessly difficult, you may be right, particularly if your job is public administration. Those who study or practice public management know full well the difficulties faced by administrators of complex bureaucratic systems. What they don't know is why some jobs in the public sector are harder than others and how good managers cope with those jobs. Drawing on leadership theory and social psychology, Erwin Hargrove and John Glidewell provide the first systematic analysis of the factors that determine the inherent difficulty of public management jobs and of the coping strategies employed by successful managers to test their argument. Hargrove and Glidewell focus on those jobs fraught with extreme difficulties, impossible jobs. What differentiates impossible from possible jobs are 1 the publicly perceived legitimacy of the commissioner’s clientele, 2 the intensity of the conflict among the agency’s constituencies, 3 the public’s confidence in the authority of the commissioner’s profession, and 4 the strength of the agency’s myth or long-term idealistic goal. Hargrove and Glidewell flesh out their analysis with six case studies that focus on the roles played by leaders of specific agencies. Each essay summarizes the institutional strengths and weaknesses, specifies what makes the job impossible, and then compares the skills and strategies that incumbents have employed in coping with such jobs. Readers will come away with a thorough understanding of the conflicting social, psychological, and political forces that act on commissionaires in impossible jobs.
